Andrew Cohen is an author, columnist, broadcaster and professor of journalism at Carleton University. He teaches courses on Canada and the United States, Canada and the World, and analytical writing.

In a career of 40 years, he has written for The Globe and Mail, The New York Times, Foreign Affairs, United Press International, Time, CNN.com, and The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, among other publications.

He has won two National Newspaper Awards and three National Magazine Awards and been awarded the Queen's Jubilee Medal. He writes a weekly column for The Ottawa Citizen and appears as a commentator on CTV News Channel on U.S. politics.

His seven books cover subjects ranging from Canada's constitutional politics to national character to Arctic exploration. His study of Canadian foreign policy -- While Canada Slept: How We Lost Our Place in the World -- was a finalist for the Governor General's Literary Award for Non-Fiction.

A native of Montreal, Professor Cohen went to McGill University, Carleton University and the University of Cambridge. He has degrees in political science, journalism and international relations.

He was correspondent and columnist for The Globe and Mail in Washington, where he recently returned as a Fulbright Scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center.
